For breakfast (śniadanie), Poles usually have a slice of bread topped with cold cuts or kiełbasa, or scrambled eggs. There can also be a side of dairy - either kefir, or quark cheese mixed with radishes. Lunch (obiad) is typically a two-course meal, where a soup such as rosoft is served as a starter and a meat (or fish) dish with potatoes or rice is served as a main course.

Interesting Interesujący

Dinner (kolacja) in Poland is much lighter than lunch, e.g. sandwiches or salads are generally served for dinner. Another popular dish served for dinner is crepes stuffed with farmer's cheese called nalesnîki.

Rosół is a traditional Polish chicken soup with noodles made by simmering chicken, vegetables and spices in water for a long period of time.

Bigos is a Polish dish made with various kinds of chopped meats stewed with sauerkraut and shredded cabbage. It is served hot and can be enriched with vegetables, spices or wine.

Pierogi are filled dumplings made by wrapping unleavened dough around a savoury or sweet filling and cooking in boiling water.
